6.0 Geology & Reservoir Information:

6.1 Geology of Baghewala area

The Baghewala heavy oil field in Bikaner-Nagaur basin of Rajasthan was discovered way back in 1991 through drilling of first exploratory well BGW-1 in the Baghewala structure. The well encountered heavy oil (17° - 19° API) in deeper Jodhpur sandstone and Lower Bilara formation of Infracambrian age. There were good positive indications of presence of Bitumen (extra heavy) oil in the shallow Upper Carbonate formation which could not be tested in BGW-1. BGW-2 was drilled on the same plinth of BGW-1 in order to test the Upper Carbonate formation. Subsequently, three appraisal wells viz., BGW-3, 4 & 5 were drilled during 1992-94 to delineate the extension of heavy oil bearing Jodhpur sandstone and Lower Bilara reservoirs. Well BGW-4 and 5 encountered the heavy oil bearing zones within the Jodhpur-Bilara section where as well BGW-3 was found to be water wet.

Following discovery of heavy oil in the wells drilled in Baghewala structure, the Baghewala PML covering an area of 210 Km² encompassing the Baghewala structure was granted to OIL in 2003 for a period of 20 years. The PML area was earlier covered by around 370 LKM of 2D seismic data of 1985-87 and 1991-92 vintage. A total of six wells were drilled in the PML area during 1991-94, five on the Baghewala and one well on the Tavriwala structures. Well TVW-10n the crestal part of Tavriwala structure was abandoned as dry without lowering production casing.

6.2 Regional Structural Settings and Stratigraphy

The Bikaner-Nagaur basin constitutes a Late Proterozoic – Early Paleozoic basin in the north western part of peninsular Indian shield. Structurally Bikaner-Nagaur basin is bounded in the east by Delhi- Aravalli folding and in the south, south-west by Pokhran-Nachna high, separating Jaisalmer basin and to the north-east lies the Delhi-Sargodha ridge.

This is a shallow Infracambrian-Paleozoic basin with a Precambrian basement comprised of Malani Igneous Suite and Delhi Metamorphites. The igneous and metamorphic rocks at places are overlain and intruded by Malani Volcanics (Rhyolites) of Pre-Cambrian age. These rocks are unconformably overlain by Marwar Super Group. The Marwar Super Group is comprised of the arenaceous Jodhpur group, the calcareous Bilara Group containing stromatolytic carbonates & clastics, Hanseran Evaporites & salts (HEG) and argillaceous & arenaceous Nagaur Group of Infracambrian to lower Cambrian age. The Marwar Supergroup is overlain by thick Upper Carbonate formation of Upper Cambrian age comprising of predominantly dolomites, limestone with shales and evaporites.

The Lower Paleozoic sequence is unconformably overlain by the Upper Carboniferous glacial Bap Boulder Beds and marine Badhaura sandstones. For the major period in Mesozoic times, the basin remained uplifted and most of the Mesozoic sequences are absent. Successively upward, the Tertiary sediments comprising Khuiala equivalent (Palana shale), Marh sandstone and Jogira fullers earth have been deposited.

Geologic History

In Bikaner-Nagaur basin the Infracambrian-Cambrian formations, which evolved through Precambrian-Paleozoic Wilson cycle, is of prime interest from petroleum geology point of view. The Precambrian – Palaeozoic Wilson cycle started in the Precambrian and concluded with the assembly of Gondwanaland in the Silurian-Devonian. The rift phase (approx 680-650 Ma, Late Proterozoic) represents synrift volcano-clastic sequences which have been locally assigned to the Malani Igneous Suite. During thermal subsidence phase (approximately 650-440 Ma, Infracambrian-Silurian), three main sequences can regionally be recognized in the evolution of Bikaner-Nagaur basin. The accommodation space presumably resulted from thermal subsidence associated with continental drift and the growth of Late Proterozoic oceans.

Sedimentation of Jodhpur formation, the main reservoir facies of the basin, started with coarse grained to granular, cross bedded sandstone and rippled sandstones-siltstones that have been deposited in coastal plain channels oriented oblique to shoreline and tidal flat to coastal plain fine grained sand-shale alternations deposited along the shoreline. Thermal subsidence continued probably through the Infracambrian as indicated by the lagoon-tidal flat to restricted basin facies assemblage of Bilara and Hanseran groups (HEG). The HEG is characterized by thick and widespread evaporite deposition in lower part and mix clastic-carbonate in upper part whereas Bilara represents mixed carbonate and clastic sedimentation. In general, Jodhpur, Bilara and HEG appears to have deposited in fluctuating shoreline to low order regressive environment, controlled by tectonic topography in a range of coastal plane to tidal flat setting. Cambrian shows deposition of the shales, calcareous sandstones and thin dolomitic limestones of the Nagaur Group deposited as regional transgressive facies. The Upper Carbonate Groups caps this sequence in Late Cambrian as prograding carbonate flats.

The basin experienced a strong regional upliftment during post-Cambrian and it remained emergent and non-depositional during Ordovician, Silurian and Devonian periods. The basin bound fault system got reactivated during Permo-Triassic time with deposition of conglomerate, gritty sandstone, chert with minor cherty dolomite of Bap and Badhaura formations. The basin floor underwent northwesterly tilting with the development of prominent Pokhran-Nachna high. The basin remained uplifted for a considerable time during Mesozoic.

The subsurface geological data from the drilled well reveals fluvio-deltaic Jurassic sediments consisting of red brittle to pinkish ferruginous sandstone overlies unconformity the Bap and Badhaura formation. The Jurassic sediments are overlain by a thin sequence of dark grey claystone with minor sandstone of Maestrichtian age.

6.3 Reservoir Development & crude properties

Within the Jodhpur formation, the overall sand development is good as evident from the drilled wells. Wells BGW-4 and BGW-5 exhibit high net-to-gross ratios as compared to BGW-1 and BGW-3. The thickness of the formation varies from 26 - 30 m in the drilled wells. The Jodhpur formation represented by alternating sandstone – claystone sequences and the thickness of individual sandstone layers varies from 2 - 10 m in the drilled wells. However, it is difficult to establish a correlation of individual sand units within the formation. The conventional core report of drilled wells indicated both fining-upward and coarsening-upwards sequence for Jodhpur sandstones. Analysis of conventional core samples of Jodhpur sandstone reservoirs from wells BGW-1 & 5 reported porosities ranging upto 22.5% and permeabilities over 2 darcy's.

Consequent to the upliftment during Upper Cretaceous — Lower Paleocene (initiation of Himalayan collision phase), the western Rajasthan shelf had a widespread marine regression during Paleocene with deposition of conglomerate, sandstone of Palana and Marh formations. Early Eocene marine transgression occurred with advancement of the sea in Bikaner-Nagaur basin depositing Jogira limestone. The Quaternary deposit mainly constitutes clay, claystone and sandstone. The first well Baghewala-1was drilled in the Baghewala anticlinal structure—resulted in the discovery of heavy oil in clastics of the early Cambrian Jodhpur formation, which is part of a 1500 m sedimentary cover overlying Precambrian volcanics and basement rock. Presence of heavy oil (14° - 19° API) within the Jodhpur formation of Baghewala structure was established during 1991-1994. There were also positive indications of presence of extra heavy oil in the shallow Upper Carbonate formation. So far, production of heavy oil could only be established from Jodhpur formation in Baghewala structure.

The Baghewala structure has initially been identified based on 2D seismic data and a total of six wells have been drilled so far in the structure based on the interpretation of the 2D seismic data. The Jodhpur formation represented by alternating sandstone – claystone sequences and the thickness of individual sandstone layers varies from 2 – 10 m in the drilled wells. However, it is difficult to establish a correlation of individual sand units within the formation. The conventional core report of drilled wells indicated both fining-upward and coarsening-upwards sequence for Jodhpur sandstones. Analysis of conventional core samples of Jodhpur sandstone reservoirs from wells BGW-1 & 5 reported porosities ranging upto 22.5% and permeabilities over 2 darcies.

The wireline log interpretation (ELAN PLUS) results have showed effective porosity and water saturation for wells BGW-1, BGW-3, BGW-4 and BGW-5. Hydrocarbon bearing (oil) zones have been observed within the Jodhpur-Bilara section in wells BGW-1, BGW-4 and BGW-5. While the Jodhpur-Bilara section in well BGW-3 appears to be water bearing. The effective porosity of Jodhpur sandstone reservoirs varies from 5-20% and hydrocarbon saturation also varies from well to well (30 -90%). It may be noted here that wells BGW-1 and BGW-4 have produced heavy oil (14° -19° API) to the surface from Jodhpur sandstone reservoirs with negligible FTHP whereas inflow could not be established in well BGW-5 probably due to the extra heavy nature of the oil (< 14° API). The well BGW-5 is structurally located down dip of well BGW-1 & 4.
