A systems' audit is a means for verifying the efficiency of a system by performing end to end walkthrough for sample transactions of completely / partially automated process. For instance in auditing the system of purchases the audit procedure would be to follow the purchase indent from its origin in the indenting department through to the payment of the particular supplier's bill and the corresponding postings in the books of account as well as stock records. Such an audit provides a means of verifying whether the system, laid down in the manuals or by other means is actually being followed or not. It also provides a better understanding of the system and helps to disclose errors, incompleteness or irregularities in the systems of accounting or in the system of internal check.

2.2 Review of Transactions

An audit of transaction involves an examination of supporting documents and accuracy of the transactions. The primary purpose of an audit of transactions is to verify the effectiveness of internal control. The objectives of such an audit are listed below:-

- 2) The Authority sanctioning is competent to do so by virtue of the powers delegated to her/him by the provisions of any rules, regulations or orders framed or passed by the management.

The sanction accorded must be definite and must need a reference to the sanctioning authority itself or to any higher authority.

2.4 Review of Internal Control

A review of the internal control is a means by which audit can determine areas where opportunities for error or fraud exist in the system as a whole. It would be an appraisal into the organization to determine whether the management information is distributed to the appropriate level of management so that necessary action is taken by the right man at the right time. Audit must ensure that no one person should be in a position to control all phases of processing chances of error or defalcation. As far as practicable the work of an individual should be independent of, or checked by, the work of others. Similarly procedures must also be checked so as to ensure that one aspect of the control is automatically checked by a subsequent step. Audit must ensure that independent controls by management are functioning satisfactorily.
