LIKELY AREAS OF METAL DETERIORATION/EXTERNAL CORROSION

The following areas of vessels, tanks, piping are prone to external corrosion.

- i. Above ground vessels, tanks, piping piping ground are subjected to atmospheric corrosion.
- ii. Vessets skids, Pipelines touching the ground are subject to corrosion due to dampness of the soil.
- iii. Crevice corrosion may take place at the pipe supports or sleepers where pipes are resting on them.
- iv. Deterioration takes place at the pipe support locations where relative movement between pipe and pipe supports takes place.
- v. Buried pipelines are subject to soil corrosion.
- vi. Underground pipelines are subject corrosion due to presence of stray currents.
- vii. Impingement attack may take place on pipelines in the vicinity of leaky pipes and steam traps.
- viii. Insulated lines where weather shielding is damaged are subject to external corrosion.
- ix. Piping entering into or emerging from the underground may experience severe corrosion due to coating damage.
- x. Piping corrodes at locations of water accumulation and acid vapour condensation.

INTERNAL CORROSION

Usually a greater loss of metal wastage is observed near a restriction in the line or a change in line direction because of the effects of turbulence or velocity. Therefore, it is required to inspect pipe bends, elbows, and tees and also at restrictions such as orifice flanges and throttling valves, and areas just downstream of the restriction. Areas most prone to corrosion, erosion, and other forms of deterioration are:

- i. Points at which condensation of acid gases and / or water va
- ii. pour are likely to occur.
- iii. Points at which acid carryover from process operations are likely to occur.
- iv. Dead-ends and locations where liquid-vapour inter phasing or condensation occur.
- v. Valve bodies and trims, fittings, ring grooves and rings, flange faces and unexposed threads.
- vi. Welded areas (subject to preferential attack).
- vii. Steam systems subject to channelling or where condensation occurs.
- viii. Ferrous and non-ferrous piping subject to stress corrosion cracking.
- ix. Areas near flanges or welded attachments, which act as cooling fins, thereby causing localised corrosion because of condensation.
- x. Areas immediately downstream of chemical injection points where localised corrosion might occur in the reaction zone.
- xi. Dissimilar metals in contact, which may lead to galvanic corrosion.
- xii. Stagnant conditions in areas of pipelines carrying crude oils with high sulphur/chloride content.
- xiii. Locations having low pit and high chloride ions.
